Late Ice Out

by Dave Schellenberg

I have to admit, this year was particularly rough if you were an outfitter in Northern Manitoba. We had one of the latest ice outs in Manitoba history. Even Doug Webber, who has been outfitting in Manitoba for over forty years, can't recall the ice being on North Knife Lake as late as it was this year. The last of the ice finally left the north end of North Knife Lake around the 4th of July.

The late ice out did provide some benefits, such as postponing the spring Lake Trout fishing. These fish come alive once the spring melt begins and fresh nutrients from streams and creeks in the area flow into the main lake. The trout are in the shallows at this time of year, feasting on whatever they can find, and hitting almost any hook thrown into the water. Quite often we catch only the tail end of this incredible action. This year however, we enjoyed fantastic shallow water Lake Trout action well into July.

One of the groups who benefited from this was the Vukelic family from Buffalo. They are long time guests of North Knife Lake Lodge and had the opportunity to experience some of the best Lake Trout fishing we have to offer. Several Lakers in the high thirty inch range were caught.

This year we had another first, the opportunity to host our first ever Grad Retreat. A group of high school graduates chose to come to North Knife Lake Lodge to fish, relax, and enjoy life for a while before embarking into the real world.

Thank you to everyone who helped to make this another successful year. We look forward to another successful year in 2010, and hope to see you on the dock!

Day Six of a Manitoba Moose Hunt

by Jeff Lindgren

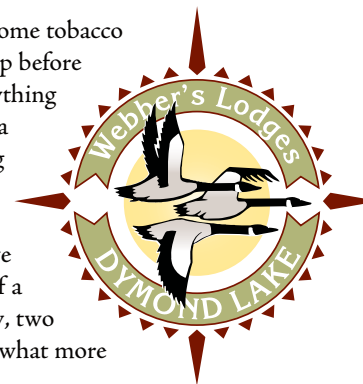

Day 6: As my guide and I are heading back to the river I can't help but think, why does the guide want to go back there, the action seems to be at the east end of the lake, but then I remind myself of what I consider the number one rule on a guided hunt NEVER GUIDE THE GUIDE, so I keep my mouth shut and trust the guy with the local knowledge. We set up high on a rock and call for a few hours, nothing, not even the distant raking sound we thought we had heard before. When we climb down from the rock Joe (my guide) says lets go up river a bit and have a look. I agree and we head out, before we even get 1/2 mile away he pulls up to shore and here I go again thinking what the heck is he stopping here for, you can almost see where we just were, but again I wisely keep my mouth shut. We walk up the bank and while it looks real "Moosey" we don't see anything so we head back to the boat. Joe gets in the boat, but I decide to answer nature's call, as I zip up and head back to the boat he holds up his hand telling me to stop! I ask why and he points off in the brush across the river and says "BULL", of course I don't hear a thing. A few seconds go by and we hear a loud crashing sound, only something real heavy could break a branch big enough to make that sound. As Joe scrambles out of the boat with his call my heart starts pounding, even before we climb back up the hill for a better view. Then I hear it UH..... UH....UH and then a cow moans, oh my god it's going to happen. Joe calls back and then points at the willows across the river, you can see them being thrashed around and pieces flying. Joe says, "Can you see him?" Of course I can't, so he keeps pointing to a spot, all I can see are the willows moving. Joe tells me to go to the right for a better angle and set up, so I get about 50 feet over, find a 45 degree dead fall for a rest and set up on the moving willows. Right then I see a paddle and it looks big, there goes the heart again, it feels like it's going to jump out of my chest. Just as I am telling myself to settle down he steps out into a small opening in the willows exposing the front half of his body, my cross hairs were already on that spot, so I just verify that I have a clear shot and pull the trigger. Even though he didn't react at all to the 200 grain swift A Frame from my 300 Ultra Mag, I can see water spray from where the bullet hit. I know it is a good shot but he is walking away like nothing hit him? I shoot again and he simply stops. He stands there for a second and falls over on his side. Suddenly everything is dead still, I can't believe it I finally have my Moose after three hunts, one in B.C., one in the Northwest Territories, and one in Manitoba, my Manitoba Monster.

Joe tells me to walk over to the river bank near the Moose and he will bring the boat. He picks me up and we go across the river and there he is no ground shrinkage at all, what a Moose - I couldn't be happier.

We take some photos and leave some tobacco nearby as thanks and open him up before going back for help to bring everything back to camp. This is definitely a "Two Boat Moose". After getting everything back to camp, Joe and I hung around to make dinner, and when the other guys got in we found out that Cedric got himself a real nice Bull as well. What a day, two Moose today, 3 for 3 on the trip, what more could you ask for.
